Points have a value of 10¢ per point and can be redeemed towards the purchase price of any order at any time. There is a $5 minimum (50 points) for any redemption. I track the points you have, and it appears on each invoice. It is your choice when you want to redeem your points. Orders placed during the months of March, June, September, and December (the month when a new pricelist appears) earn an additional 10% in points. For example, a $50 order would earn 50 points. During one of those four months, a $50 order would earn 55 points instead.

Dead computer

As I was working on getting this pricelist together to mail out, as luck would have it, my computer died. I was completely without my computer and my files. That put me incredibly far behind. It would have been easier to cut off my right hand.

I apologize for this pricelist coming out so late.

The magic words

A woman called me in a somewhat excited voice. She inherited a stamp collection that she wanted to sell.

I asked her a few questions about what was in the collection. It was the typical plate block and panes material from the 1950s and later and a large accumulation of mass produced black and white FDCs.

I explained that this type of material is everywhere. The value is likely to be a few hundred dollars.

Her tone changed. I did not say the magic words, "Congratulations! You hit the jackpot! You inherited $1 million in stamps! You can retire from your job now. Welcome to Easy Street!"

She said that she was going to check with family members and see if any of them had an interest in the collection. She would call me back later. She never called. It is OK. I am not looking to buy another average collection with common material. I have enough of those already.

$45,000 and counting

A woman called me about her father's collection. She said that he valued it between $45,000-$60,000.

I said that was a sizable amount of money. Not too many collections reach that level of value. I asked how he determined the value. For example, did another dealer appraise the collection some time ago?

She said that he added up the value of the collection years ago. She did not know when. Based on the rest of her story, it sounds like he did this in the 1980s or 1990s. She said he then increased the value of the collection by 5% every year since then.

Now I am getting concerned. Collectors would love to see a 5% increase in the value of their collection in a lifetime. A rate of 5% per year is highly unusual.

I asked what kinds of stamps were involved. She said that he had plate blocks and full panes of stamps. There were five albums starting in the 1930s.

Some of the plate blocks from the 1930s have some value. However, not $45,000+ unless there was a lot of this kind of material or there was something else unusual about the material (such as errors). If this is the typical collection of ordinary plate blocks, I am thinking that this is perhaps a few thousand dollars at the most. Of course, I would have to verify that the material was not hinged or otherwise damaged.

I asked her to email me a few photos of the earliest material in the albums. She did and it was very much what I expected. There were some Prexy plate blocks, but they were not even close to being complete.

I found a recent auction lot that sounded similar to what she had. The auction closed for $2200. I sent her the description and said that this auction lot was similar to what she had, give or take a few dollars. I explained that many stamps do not appreciate 5% in a lifetime, let alone 5% annually for many years in a row.

She replied that she would look at the auction lot and get back to me. She never did. I am not surprised. She is probably trying to find another dealer who will give her close to the $45,000 figure that her father computed. She is going to be looking for a very long time. I do not think she will ever find a dealer that would go much beyond the $2200 that the auction lot brought.

On the mark

A woman called me. She had her father's stamp collection and needed it appraised for estate purposes. We agreed to meet. She had six banker's boxes of material.

All the material was in black Lighthouse stock books. It was very nearly arranged. He put little slips of paper with the Scott catalog numbers by the stamps. This person obviously loved stamp collecting. They put a great deal of effort into organizing their collection. Most of it was US material. There was some worldwide material, but not much.

The only concern I had is that the stock books may have cost more than the collection itself. There were a few $5 and $10 type stamps. The overwhelming majority of the material was $1 or $2 or less in catalog value. Six banker's boxes will have some value just based on the volume of material. However, the appraisal was not going to be altering.

I reviewed three of the stock books. The stamps differed, of course. But the value was the same from one book to the next.

I explained to her that most of the material was ordinary. I will go through the rest of the books quickly to confirm what I suspect is already there: more common stamps. This collection was not going to have significant value. I said, "It does not look like your father spent large sums of money putting this collection together."

She said, "That is what I thought you were going to say. Before dad died, he said, 'You are not going to get a lot of value out of these stamps.'" That was music to my ears. Most heirs want to know that they have millions of dollars in stamps. Thankfully, her father correctly set the stage before he passed away and I am now confirming what he told her.

I finished the appraisal and came to a figure of $1050. She said, "I told the attorney that we should put a value of $1000 on it." I know she was just throwing that figure out there to the attorney to get the estate settled. She was right on the mark and again, I was confirming what she already knew. I could have just as easily said $500, and she would have been OK with that figure as well.

I feel like I am often the bearer of bad news when I have to tell an heir that the collection they inherited is not millions of dollars and they still have to go to work tomorrow. I never met her father. However, I am grateful that he was realistic with the value of his collection, and he passed his opinion on to her before he died. If only all appraisals could be this easy!

Compare this situation to the previous situation with the woman whose father figured the collection was worth $45,000-$60,000. This father set the stage correctly for his daughter and had a realistic value of his collection. The other father blindly added 5% value to his collection per year without a basis in reality. His daughter is going to be searching for a very long time and likely will not get an offer much above 5% or 10% of what his figure was.

You cannot win them all. Some situations work out well. Other situations are a dead end. This one was right on the mark though.

Getting a stamp appraisal

The woman I met with said that she was concerned about getting the appraisal because she did not know of any stamp collectors around the Pittsburgh area. She went on the internet and found me.

The number of stamp dealers is shrinking. Older dealers are retiring or passing away. It is very difficult to attract new dealers to the hobby. This is not a glamorous life where you are rolling in money all day long.

Back in the 1970s and earlier, you could find multiple stamp dealers in most major US cities. Today, you might find one or two dealers near a major city. If you are in a less populous state, there might only be one stamp dealer listed in the entire state. I checked the APS website, and there are no dealers listed for either KY or WY. If you live there and you need an appraisal done, someone must visit you or you have to take the collection out of state.

I am reluctant to have a stamp collector appraise a collection. Not that collectors are bad. However, many of them just quote catalog value. They do not consider centering and condition, especially on early material where that is key. They do not follow the stamp market and have much experience with current market conditions. A dealer encounters many different kinds of material and needs to be familiar with it all. Collectors sometimes know their areas of expertise, and not much else.

Appraisals should come from stamp dealers. They understand market conditions. An appraisal from a stamp dealer is going to be much more realistic compared to what you would expect to get if you sold the collection. Good luck!

The reluctant appraisal

You may find that many stamp dealers are reluctant to do formal appraisals. Why? There are several reasons.

First, sometimes the person wanting an appraisal is unrealistic. Now you must spend the time trying to convince them why they do not have a million dollars in stamps. Some people are receptive to that message; many are not.

Second, a dealer makes money by buying and selling material. Unless the appraisal fee is very high, the few dollars made doing the appraisal does not equal the money that could be brought in dealing in stamps. A dealer would rather be selling stamps than doing an appraisal, unless they felt certain that the appraisal is going to lead to a sale of the collection too.

Third, many collections do not need an appraisal. There are many collections that have a limited amount of material and/or the material is damaged. Collections like that are sometimes not worth anything. Many times, the value varies between a few dollars or maybe a few hundred dollars if there are some better items included. Dealers like to review material of value, especially if it can lead to a purchase later. There is nothing exciting about going through a banker's box of common stamps and covers and saying, "You have $20 of stuff here."

Sometimes, in cases like this, you have sellers (often heirs) who say, "But aren't you going to look at every stamp?" You take a minute or two and everything you see is low value. As a dealer, you are not going to appraise a collection, stamp by stamp, when it is a nickel here, a dime there, a quarter over here and once in a while you find a $1 stamp. Material like that is just bought and sold in bulk. The chances of a more valuable stamp being hidden in the middle are almost zero.

Dealers will do appraisals, especially if it is better material and it can lead to them purchasing the material later. If a dealer only did appraisals, they would soon find that they are not making a lot of money for the time invested unless they are charging a very high fee that most people would not be willing to pay.

Dealers are in business to make a reasonable profit. There is not much profit in doing appraisals though, especially if the material is largely common and inexpensive items.

Scott US Specialized catalog

I buy one every year. As a dealer, I need to stay up to date on prices and information.

My 2025 edition has not come yet. They are typically released every October. The 2025 edition was supposed to be released in January. Now they are saying that the printer is having trouble obtaining the paper. The 2025 catalog is supposed to be released March 24th. I have my doubts.

At this point, skip the 2025 catalog and just give me the 2026 catalog. Assuming the 2026 catalog comes out on time, I am only going to get a few months of use of the 2025 catalog before it is replaced.

Linn's Stamp News

First of all, I have no inside knowledge of what is going on with Linn's Stamp News and the Scott catalogs. Both publications are produced by Amos Media.

The Scott Stamp Monthly, which is supposed to be available in printed copy, missed several issues at the end of 2024. According to the communication from Linn's, a dispute with the printer delayed printing.

In the business world, a dispute with a company providing a service usually means that you are not paying your bills on time. Therefore, the company providing the service just stops until the money due shows up. If you are not paying, they are not going to keep providing a service. If the company goes bankrupt, you do not want to be the one holding a substantial bill waiting for payment that is never going to come. You limit your risk by allowing the customer to get only so far behind and then you stop providing the service.

The Feb 17, 2025, issue of Linn's had two display ads: Gary Posner and me. There were a little less than two pages of classified ads. The entire issue was just 20 pages long.

More recent issues of Linn's have about a half dozen advertisers. Some of the dealers who regularly placed ads have stopped. It is obvious that many dealers have stopped advertising on Linn's. My ad runs for now. I am giving it serious consideration to stop running my ad. It is a lot of money for me. Since Linn's has gone all digital and lost some of their print subscribers, I am not sure that the ad will help promote my business.

There is an old adage in the publication world. The dealers (though advertising) pay for the publication. The subscribers pay for the postage. With so few advertisers left, how does Linn's keep going? The Feb 17, 2025, only had two display advertisers. Gary Posner's ad is two full pages. However, that ad alone cannot pay for the editorial staff salaries and other publication costs. You can only run at a deficit for so long and use up any reserve money. Eventually, you go broke, or you have to make substantial changes to survive.

This is not a knock at Linn's. Everything I've stated is public knowledge or it is a conjecture that has already been posted online by other prominent collectors that are questioning where all of this is headed.

I hope Linn's and the Scott catalogs survive. The hobby would be worse off if either of them failed.

Again, I have no insider knowledge. I just hope they get their act together, get things straightened out with the printer, and get back on track. That is what would be best for the hobby.

Scott Catalogs

Another sign of concern is that the 2026 Scott catalogs are only going to be printed according to pre-orders received. In short, if you want a set of printed catalogs, you order them ahead of time. I am sure that they will print a few extra copies, but not as many as in past years. If you do not order early, then you are not going to get a set. They are not going to be available unless you buy a set from a stamp dealer who ordered several sets to sell.

In short, if you want a printed set of 2026 Scott catalogs; order it soon or go without.

DeJoy Departure

Louis DeJoy has signaled to the USPS Board of Governors that he intends to step down soon. No actual date has been given for his departure. It will likely be some time later this year. Depending on how the search for the next Postmaster General goes, it could be as short as a few weeks. Likely, this will be a multi-month process.

DeJoy has been Postmaster General for about five years. He will probably disagree. However, I feel that he has been as ineffective as most of his successors. I am not trying to be disrespectful. All I am saying is that the USPS has operated at a deficit for many years now. Delays and delivery problems continue to hound the USPS.

DeJoy had his Delivering for America plan. I have been a vocal critic of that plan for some time now. I still feel that his plan has made things worse. The mail takes longer today than ever before to be delivered. When his plan was first announced, others were immediately critical. I took more of a wait-and-see how this plays out approach. Despite assurances that things would improve in time, they never did. I joined the chorus that said we need a different plan. This one is not working.

DeJoy's successors were equally unable to make significant changes to improve the USPS. Things continued status quo year after year. Prices keep going up, service keeps going down, and the USPS runs at a deficit year after year.

Will the next Postmaster General be any more successful than the prior batch? I have my doubts. When DeJoy first came in, he started to shake things up. Again, with some criticism right away. I thought he could be the catalyst to change the USPS given his background in logistics and operations. He was an outsider to the USPS. To me, he did not carry the baggage of "We have done it this way for years. Why change now?"

Change is desperately needed to turn the USPS around.

Is that privatization that President Trump has hinted at? Maybe. If I had the answers and they were so simple, I would be Postmaster General. I am not. However, I am very skeptical that the next person filling that role will be any different than the others before them.

Is the USPS beyond repair? Maybe.

Mail used to be delivered twice a day. That changed in 1950 when the USPOD (as it was known then) went to once a day delivery. In larger cities, businesses sometimes enjoyed mail delivery more than twice a day.

The postage rate in 1950 was 3 cents. Translated to 2025 for inflation, that is 41 cents today. We are paying almost twice as much for postage for far less service despite all of the strides in automation that the USPS has implemented since the 1960s. What is wrong with this picture?

I hope the USPS gets its act together and the next Postmaster General is successful. Again, I have my doubts. At what point in time though do we say, "The status quo is not working. It is time for a different approach." And I am not talking about superficial changes like converting the Delivering for America plan into the Meeting Customer Needs plan. It is lipstick on the same pig. The public is not foolish. First class mail volumes have been dropping for years. That business is never coming back. The public has lost confidence in the USPS being able to reliably deliver the mail. The public has largely move to electronic communication (email and text messages) and electronic payments.

The USPS needs to wake up and make substantial changes that have meaning. Otherwise, business is going to continue to erode until one day, the public is going to find that they no longer need the USPS.

Ask anyone in the 18-25 age group when is the last time they mailed a letter. I am willing to bet that most of them do not know the cost of a letter. Most of them have rarely, if ever, mailed an envelope. They do all of their communication on their smart phone. Other than getting a package in the mail, they have no need for the USPS.

USPS 2025 issues

The USPS has released details of some of the planned new issues for 2025. Once again, it is a mixed bag.

The Love stamp is boring. It is the outline of two non-descript figures. If you ask me, it looks like two male figures. Are they carrying the Heart shape? Are they about to be crushed by the Heart shape? The squiggly lines suggest tension or pressure, not Love. I have zero artistic ability. That is why I became an engineer. However, I could have drawn something as simple as this. Call me uninspired.

The round (of course!) stamp for international mail shows a compass. Why do international mail stamps have to be round? I feel like the USPS is quickly running out of ideas for round objects to use for these issues. The compass design is not very imaginative in my opinion. It is round and it fits. The USPS has released other round stamps (Pinback buttons, Let's Play Ball) that are fine and are not for international mail.

How about the USPS turn to rectangular stamps and start using scenes from National Parks in other countries, historic buildings from other countries, and so forth. There is no shortage of subjects from other countries that would be wonderful and imaginative if the USPS would retire the round shape.

The American Vistas issues are boring. They look computer generated. Issues like these continually rank as the least necessary and overall worst design in the annual Linn's poll of new issues.

The Appalachian Trail stamps look promising. This may be one of the most attractive issues for 2025.

Vibrant leaves are so-so. I think a better design would be fall colors along a hillside, mountain, or lake. Why have just one leaf? A full fall scene would have more impact in my opinion.

It is time for another floral design. This year it is Dahlias. I am not a floral expert, but all of these roses, tulips, dahlias, and so forth look so much alike. I wonder if you took a strip of 10 of the tulip issue and remove (say) four of the stamps and put in four roses instead. Assuming the die cuts line up, would anyone notice that you mixed the floral issues? A florist may spot the difference. The average person would not.

I am just kind of done with the annual floral design. Can we move onto something else?

Speaking of tired designs, we have our annual Flag stamp that will come in 392 versions of sheet, coil, and booklet formats – with and without microprinting. Having a flag stamp is important. Some mailers are patriotic and like the flag designs. I just question why we need a new flag design every year.

The nonmachineable surcharge stamp is a Luna Moth this year. I guess we ran out of Butterfly ideas. How many moths are there? They all have wings and fly. They look similar. Lump together butterflies and moths. They are all the same.

You know I am going to complain about the Baby Wild Animals issue. Three boring colors: orange, blue, and black. Ho-hum.

Has anyone ever seen a blue raccoon? Neither have I.

Can someone please call a chiropractor and get that skunk some help! That has to be the strangest position (and most uncomfortable) that I have ever seen for an animal. I did not know that skunks are contortionists.

Rabbits are herbivores. They only eat plants. However, the rabbit on this issue seems to have his eye on that snail on the leaf. Or is that a slug? I cannot tell the difference. The rabbit may want the leaf. The snail is safe though and will not be eaten by the rabbit.

The chipmunk issue could also be a rat.

These Papier-mâché designs do not do their subjects justice. Can we just get a few pictures of real wild baby animals in their natural habitat and use those images instead? Again, this issue will rank low in necessity and rank near the bottom as one of the worst designs. It is a dishonor well deserved.

I like the Betty White stamp. I think the photo captures her image perfectly. She was a great actress and full of comedy. I saw her on the Mary Tyler Moore show and Golden Girls. She has this dry sense of humor sometimes that just resonates with me. She did not have a mean bone in her body, and you never heard her speak poorly of someone. This is an honor well deserved.

The Winter Landscapes will be nice. Like the Appalachian Trail stamps, these will be one of the more pleasing designs for 2025.

There are a few hits. There are several failures. If only the USPS would listen to me 100% of the time and we would have some really attractive stamps each year. My phone number and email address are available if someone from the USPS wants to call me.

Feel free to disagree with me on any of these comments other than the Baby Wild Animal stamps. Sorry, there is no wiggle room there. They are one of the worst designs for the USPS.

Sept 11th

In the early summer, I went to review the collection of a member of the local club who passed away. It was a sizable collection of some value. The widow was not ready to sell it yet. There was still some emotional attachment. I was involved in some other collections at the time. I said that I was interested in purchasing it, possibly in the fall though. We all agreed that was fine.

I lost her phone number, so I dropped her a letter in the mail saying that I was ready to purchase the collection if she was ready to part with it.

I got a phone call from her daughter. Yes, mom was ready to dispose of the collection. Her mom was a bit emotional though. My letter arrived on Sept 11, 2024 – exactly two years to the day when her husband passed away. She was dealing with the anniversary of his death, and my letter arrived that same day.

I told her daughter – maybe this was a sign that it was OK to let go of the collection now. It has been two years. It is time to let others enjoy the material as much as he did.

We arranged to meet the following weekend. I packed up his stamp room and put all the albums and boxes in my car. It was quite full. The room looked rather empty once all the material was gone.

There is still the sadness of losing him and having to deal with everything. If she did not sell the collection, it would fall to the kids. She did not want to burden her kids with disposing of the collection. There was a sense of satisfaction too – that the material was going to new homes.

I did not think it was coincidence that my letter arrived on Sept 11. I think it was meant to be. She was satisfied with the sale. Sad and emotional but still satisfied. I was satisfied with the purchase. Things worked out well.

Volunteering pays off

Paul from the Buffalo stamp club comes to the shows in Erie. He runs the club auction during the show. Lots can either have a minimum bid or a Buy It Now price on it.

Paul volunteers his time. However, there is a side benefit to running the auctions.

Paul is the first one to see the lots submitted. At the show in December, I submitted about 30 worldwide collections to the auction. There were several that Paul was interested in. Because I had a Buy It Now price on there, Paul bought them before the show opened.

I admire people who are willing to volunteer and serve stamp organizations. I hold an office in several clubs myself. Sometimes there is a side benefit to the work you do for clubs.

Paul is a big help. I am glad that he got first pick on a few collections that he wanted. Paul helps the club. He gets a little something out of it for his time involved. Everyone wins!

You should volunteer without thought of compensation. However, if an opportunity presents itself, I see nothing wrong with receiving a little pay back for your efforts.

Not making sales

I reviewed a collection that contained remainder sales books from the APS circuits. Some of the books had ordinary material. Some of the books were priced between $200 and $500. You do not typically find circuit books with more valuable material in them. I took a closer look.

Some of the stamps had catalog values up to $500. Some of the stamps were sound. However, many of the more expensive issues had faults. Some faults were small (thin). Some faults were more serious – missing pieces or very heavy cancellations making the stamp almost unreadable.

The collector priced the very faulty stamps at about 50% of catalog value. Stamps with smaller faults were priced a little higher.

The tracking on the back of the books showed that it went through six to eight collectors before being returned. There were some items missing that collectors took out, but not many.

For example, they had several stamps with missing pieces. A $50 stamp may have been priced at $20 or $25. In my opinion, that stamp is $5 at best – more like $2 (give or take) in that condition. Not everyone can afford a $50 stamp. With damage like that though – collectors are only going to buy it if it is about 10-20% of catalog value in my experience. From the large amount of material left in the books after other collectors went through them, I think they agreed and passed on making any purchases at the quoted price.

Some collectors like to try and sell their duplicate material through the APS sales circuits. If your books are coming back though with very few sales, you have to ask yourself, “Is my material priced too high? Why isn’t it selling?” A dealer is not going to price everything for you. Maybe you could ask a dealer (or check online price lists) and see what other dealers are selling material for? You have to keep centering and condition in mind. No two stamps are going to be identical. However, if you see material that is lightly damaged (small thin, etc.) for 40% of catalog value and you are at 75% of catalog value, your price may be too high.

I have not sold through the APS sales circuits. I know collectors who have sold through there. In general, the buyers are looking for bargains. In general, they are looking for material that is priced under what a dealer would charge. If dealers are selling a particular stamp for (say) $3, they are looking to get the stamp in the circuit books for $2 or $2.50.

If you are selling through circuit books and not making many sales, take a step back and reevaluate your material. I hope you make lots of sales. Good luck!

Is that a real stamp?

I received a registered package from an auction firm that I won some auction lots at. They used one of the space hologram stamps (Scott #3409-13) on the package.

When I picked up my package at the window, all three postal clerks said the same thing. “We did not think that was a valid stamp. We had to look it up. Then we realized that it was a package for you!”

They were not familiar with the hologram stamps. It is understandable. They are over 20 years old now. It is logical to question whether it is a valid stamp or not.

Of course, they realized it was a real stamp when they looked it up. Because it was addressed to me and they are used to all my packages (incoming and outgoing) being franked with bizarre stamps that no other normal person would use, they were doubly OK with it.

It was a good laugh for everyone. I am glad that I can provide some comic relief when they probably get more than their fair share of difficult customers to deal with.

Memory loss

A customer of mine had a friend who wanted to dispose of his stamp collection. I agreed to meet him. My customer was coming over as well to assist.

I met the gentleman at his house. He had his US collection laid out on a table. There was a small stock book of about 50 assorted stamps. There were a few stamps of moderate value. There were about 200 assorted covers. A few had values of $5 or $10 per cover. Most of the covers were ordinary and worth very little.

He had a Canadian collection that was better. It was worth a few hundred dollars.

He thought the collection was worth over $5000. My offer was a fraction of his figure. The material just was not there. It fits in a banker’s box with room to spare.

He asked what stamps had value. I described the factors of demand, condition, and centering. We had a good chat, but there were several times where I felt he asked the same question over again, just in a slightly different way.

He said he was going to accept my offer. I started to write the check. Then he said, “Do you think I could get more if I take it around to the clubs and let others pick through it?” I described what cherry picking the best material meant. I said it was up to him. If he wanted to go in that direction instead, I would probably not be interested in the balance because any better items would be gone.

Then I said, “If you are accepting my offer, then I am taking the material with me.” He agreed.

It was an odd conversation. Not unpleasant, just a little odd.

When we left, my customer and I were talking outside the house. He told me that his friend has early onset of Alzheimer's disease. Then it all made sense to me! We were talking perfectly fine, and then he would say something that threw me for a loop. Now I understand why.

My customer said, "Thank you for being patient and conversing with him and treating him fairly. I am sorry that the collection was not more valuable." It was not an overly valuable collection, but I will do OK with it. I am just glad that my customer was there to help navigate through the process. Without him, I would not have understood what was going on. Because I was having a nice conversation with the seller until he threw me a curve ball, it never dawned on me that he was having memory and comprehension issues.

It all ended well. I bought the collection, and I will do OK with it. My customer was happy that he found a dealer (me) who would treat his friend fairly. Everyone was a winner.

A lesson learned for me is that if I have a similar conversation in the future and there are some unexpected twists and turns, I will now think back to this situation and try to approach it with the idea that the person I am talking to has memory and comprehension challenges. It makes me a better dealer.

It reminds me of a situation I saw about twenty years ago when I was going to Pitt for my MBA.

I was in a pizza shop one night grabbing a bite to eat before class started. The man at the counter was polite. He took my order, called out my number when my pizza was ready, and everything was great.

I am sitting at a table close to the counter when a woman walked up to place her order. She was on her phone with her head slightly turned. She is talking on the phone while giving him an order. He said, "I am sorry. Can you repeat that?" She went ballistic. Why didn't he get her order?

Then it dawned on me as I am watching his woman read him the riot act about not getting her order. He is deaf. He reads lips. Because her head was turned and she was on the phone talking at the same time, he was not able to fully read her lips and get her order.

Instead of calling attention to his disability and saying, "I am sorry. I am deaf. I read lips," he just let the woman spout off until she gave him her order again and he got it right this time. She was too busy on her phone though (and arrogant if you ask me) to realize what was happening.

I am sure that was not the first time this worker was scolded for not understanding an order. Instead of revealing his disability and maybe receiving a pity party, he just let the customer sound off. He took the brunt of it and moved on.

It was a teachable moment for me that you sometimes have to look past the surface to understand what is truly going on. That happened to me this time. I was not mad at the man with the collection, just confused that we were back and forth sometimes when I thought we had an agreement. Things became clear when my customer brought it to my attention. I am not sure that I would have picked up on it otherwise.

You become a better dealer when you understand the seller (or collector) involved. Sometimes the situation is not obvious and it takes a little extra work to truly understand what is going on.

Let's jam!

Everyone is familiar with the manila stock cards and stock pages. They are popular among stamp collectors, especially for organizing and storing duplicates.

Some collectors use a single space on the stock page to jam as many stamps as possible for that particular catalog number into that one stop. The problem is that the pockets get stretched. For example, there may be a set of five stamps, and the collector puts the five stamps in a single row. There may be 20 or 30 copies of the first two stamps which are the most common ones. The last three stamps in the set have far fewer duplicates. However, the thickness of the first two stamps stretches the pocket. Then the stamps start falling out because the stiffness of the pocket is gone.

Instead of stacking 10, 20, or 30 copies on top of each other and stretching the pocket beyond any reasonable means, a better option would be to (for example), use 5 rows for the duplicates. One stamp (or Scott number) per row. It is OK to overlap the stamps by (say) 50% or 75%. That creates a thickness that is at most 2 or 3 stamps thick. It will stretch the pocket a little, but not a lot. The pocket will still keep the stamps snug, and they will not fall out.

It may mean that you have to use more stock pages for your duplicates. But your stock book won't be bulging with stamps jammed in there that fall out the first time you turn a page. It is more important to keep your stamps snug and in place than it is to save a few dollars on stock pages and jamming too many copies into a single spot.

A cover out of nowhere

Because I am the President of the ASDA and I write a column on how to become a stamp dealer, I get a lot of questions. I try to answer all of them. It can be challenging at times.

I got an email from a reader in Argentina. He sent me a scan of a cover that went from Argentina to Germany. He identified the stamps on it by Scott catalog number. He wanted to know what the cover was worth. He was going to sell it on eBay.

I know US stamps. I am getting better at worldwide stamps. I know enough about postal history to be dangerous. I know something about US postal history, but I am not an expert. I know very little about worldwide postal history.

The cover looked ordinary. The stamps were common. It was not addressed to anyone famous. It looked like a cover that you would pick out of a dealer's box for $1 or less. I told him that I felt the cover was worth $1. I pointed him to a few web sites of other postal history dealers. He can search on their website and see if he can find something similar.

Nothing about my background suggests that I am an authority on worldwide postal history.

I gave it my best educated opinion. I hope he finds a similar cover on a dealer's website and finds out that he does have that $1 million cover. I wished him luck in selling his cover.

Sometimes the strangest questions come out of nowhere.

I got a guy

I attend the Erie stamp shows. It is a small show: four dealers. It may be small, but I do well there. I enjoy going to Erie.

The last four times, an older gentleman has come to the show. He had some mint US stamps – mostly discount postage. I try to be respectful and help him a little bit as I can. I have other customers to help too. He has lots of questions. I cannot spend all my time with him.

At the last show in December 2024, I was at my table helping someone and I hear, "I got a guy." I look up and here comes the guy in the door with someone from the Erie club helping him. The club member was carrying a couple green Scott albums for him. As soon as they came through the doorway, he looked over at me and said, "He is over here!"

He came over to my table. He had three books of mint United Nations stamps. I took a quick look and said, "Sorry, I cannot use material like this." I sent him over to another dealer at the show and the other dealer bought the UN material.

He came back over to my table, and he had a few more questions. I was helping him. I had a used set of Zeppelins, Scott #C13-C15 under the glass. He asked, "What is the price on those?" I showed him the set I had. He said, "I have a set of those at home."

Everything else he showed me up to this point has been inexpensive, common US stamps. I advised him to use them for postage and get the face value.

He asked, "What do you pay for a set of those stamps?" I asked if they were cancelled or not. He said, "No, they are new." I said the price depends on the centering and condition of the stamps. He was familiar with hinges because some of the mint stamps he had were hinged on album pages. I said that I would have to see the stamps to determine the value.

He said, "Well, they are at home. Maybe I can bring them next time." My heart sank a little. I like to buy Zeppelin stamps. They are in demand. Then he said, "Well, maybe I can run home and get them." I said, "I am here for another 4 hours. I have time if you do."

He left and came back a half hour later with the stamps. He must live fairly close to the show. He brought another green Scott album. I looked through it. There were some modern mint issues and back of the book material. The modern mint was discount postage.

He had the first six airmails and a Baby Zeppelin, #C18. The spaces for the Zeppelin stamps were empty. There was some value there, but not a lot. I said, "These blank spaces are for the Zeppelin stamps. They are not here. The rest of the airmail stamps have some value, but not a lot."

He pulled a stock card from his pocket and there were the Zeppelin stamps. He said, "My brother left them on the card. He never put them in the album."

The set was in Crystal mounts on the card. They were lightly hinged, but undamaged. It is still a nice set.

I made him an offer for the back of the book material. He said, "I have to check with my brother in Ohio. These are his stamps." My heart sank again. Should I offer my cell phone to him to call his brother and see if he wanted to sell the stamps now? I would like to get the set, yes. However, I did not want to come across as too pushy.

"I will check with him, and I will see you in the spring at the show," he said. I agreed.

He thanked me for my time and help. He said, "You have helped me. You are my guy. I will bring the stamps to you first."

It made me feel good that he trusted me. I did not get to buy them now. There is a good chance that I will be able to buy them at the show in the spring.

Success is when people actively seek you out. It took a lot of common mint stamps to finally get to the stamps of value. Patience paid off. I will be happy when I can buy the Zeppelin stamps. In a small way, I consider it a form of compensation for spending time with him going over ordinary stamps. I am not sure that other dealers would have taken that much time. I like to help as much as I can. This is a small reward for me for the time spent.

I hope I can be your guy too!

Time well spent

A fellow dealer of mine in Ohio told me about a woman who is retired, and she works on stamps to keep busy. She recently came to him with several stock pages of common, used US stamps from the 1930s and later. They were in order by Scott number. She asked, "What will you give me for this accumulation?" His reply was, "$5."

She said, "That's it? I have about 40 hours involved in putting these stamps together." She was probably right. However, common used stamps do not sell that well these days. Most collectors want mint stamps. Material like this sells for pennies per stamp. Instead of going through 40 hours of organizing it, she could have left it as an accumulation in a box with no time involved and got the same amount of money.

That is something that a dealer does. They look at the material and figure out if it is better to break it down individually or just leave it as a group or accumulation. You must look at the time involved and what you think the final price will be. Sometimes, the amount of labor in putting something together exceeds the expected value in the end.

She is retired and she is doing this for spending money. She is not looking to make a million dollars. However, she learned a valuable lesson this time. Do not put a lot of work into something when the money in the end is not worth the time spent on it. Buy it cheap, sell it cheap, and let it go.

Interesting figures

The recent issue of the Philatelic Communicator arrived. This is the newsletter of the APS Writers Unit #30. Editor Mark Kellner shared some interesting figures.

In 2005, the APS had 45,277 members. In 2025, there are 25,546 members. That is about 56.5% of the number of members in 2005.

Linn's Stamp News had 31,843 subscribers in 2008. In October 2024, there were 2451 subscribers for the printed copy and 4635 subscribers for the electronic copy. Since Linn's has gone to all digital for the weekly magazine, those numbers may be even smaller. Assume the numbers have not changed. Linn's has 22% of the number of subscribers today compared to 2008.

That looks like the hobby is dying. I disagree. The hobby is changing, and traditional philately is not keeping up.

People do not look to traditional organizations and publications as they once did for their information. Even in the 1970s and 1980s, if you wanted to know about stamps, you joined a club (e.g., the APS), and you subscribed to publications (Linn's, etc.). Today, there is so much free information online, you can learn a lot about stamps (some good and some bad) just by watching YouTube videos, X (formerly Twitter), Facebook, podcasts, and many other forms of electronic media. Why spend money joining a club or reading a publication when most of the information is free.

This is true of the general media too. Many major publications are now only in digital format. Small hometown newspapers cease to exist. Some publications have lost a huge percentage of readers.

Keeping up

As most of you know, I am a part-time stamp dealer. I am a software engineer by profession. Stamps are a side business of mine. Although given the amount of time I spend on stamps, stamps are a second full-time job.

Changes at my full-time job have taken away a significant chunk of time for me.

During Covid and my triple bypass surgery in 2022, I worked full-time from home. Now I am required to be in the office five days a week along with my other colleagues. I work in the city of Pittsburgh. My commute is about one hour each way. I now spend ten hours a week sitting in city traffic to commute to work.

Several people have quit once we went to five days in the office. The amount of work has not decreased. We have not been able to hire new people to replace the ones that have left. Many people in information technology look for a fully remote position or something that is at least hybrid. This translates into more work and more responsibility being placed on me (and others) to pick up the work left behind by those who have left the company.

I once had a good work/life balance. Now I do not. I am looking to find another job somewhere else to try and bring that work/life balance back into equilibrium.

This presents some challenges in keeping up with the stamp business. I have lost 15-20 hours per week that I do not have to work on stamps. It is affecting my business and my ability to keep up with orders and the other demands of my stamp business.

No complaints. It is just something that I am working towards and trying to get back the time for stamps again. I hope to affect a change soon. Thanks for your understanding while trying to bring balance back to my life.

Typical collections

Another dilemma I am trying to fix is dealing with the typical collection of inexpensive or slightly moderately priced material.

Since my dealer friend from Butler, Tom Sivak, passed away, everyone in the Pittsburgh area has been contacting me about the collection they inherited. I get ten or more emails and phone calls per month from someone looking to sell a collection. A few of these collections have considerable material with strong demand. Many of these collections are the usual mint stamps (read: discount postage), plate blocks, and first day covers.

One thing I have come to realize is that I have been buying too many average collections that take up too much of my time and do not return a reasonable profit for the time involved. Therefore, I decided to change my approach.

I have been turning down low value collections for some time. I now need to turn away some of the moderately valued collections too. I cannot buy it all and I have a significant stock in this type of material. I do not need more. When you spend $100, $200, or $500 on these smaller collections, it adds up after a while when you buy so many.

For the collections I do buy though, I am taking a different approach. Instead of taking time to break them down, my plan is to offer them more as-is. You will see some of that in the specials this time. More will be coming as I try to unload some of what I have accumulated so far. I need to move material faster, not sit on it.

My concentration needs to shift to better material. I have two collections on hold in the Pittsburgh area with sellers. I do not have the money to put into the collections at this moment. However, I have agreed to buy them soon. They both contain significantly more valuable material that is worth my effort.

There is some better material in my pricelist this time. More is to come. Some of this material will be higher value. More of it will be of moderate value. That is where demand is at. I need to keep my stock up with demand and stop tying up my money in all the typical collections that come my way.

I will not turn this around in a month. However, change is coming. I hope it brings you more of the material that you need for your collection.

Is it original gum?

A collector (not a customer) emailed me. He remembered an article that I wrote some time ago about how to detect if your stamps were original gum or not. He asked if I still had that article. If so, could I forward a copy of it to him?

I sent him a copy of my article. I was happy to help. I hoped that the article would be of use to him.

In summary, the article mentioned two things. First, if traces of gum are detected on the face of the stamp or in the perforation holes, the stamp is probably regummed. Stamps are gummed before they are perforated. On original gum stamps, there should be no evidence of gum in the perforation holes. Second, you can use known stamps to compare to a copy in question. For example, the Columbian issues were all produced at the same time. If you have a 1¢ Columbian that you know is original gum, you can compare it to a $5 Columbian that is in question. If the gum on the $5 Columbian looks nothing like the 1¢, there is a good chance that the $5 Columbian is not original gum.

The gentleman emailed me back and thanked me for the article. He said that he had a collection with a catalog value of $220,000 that he was considering selling. He bought most of his material on eBay. He was now wondering if some of the material he bought was original gum or not.

I emailed him back and asked if he bought from known stamp dealers that sell on eBay. Or did he buy from random sellers? He replied that he bought from various sellers.

He did not reveal what he paid for his collection, and I did not ask. I doubt he paid $220,000. He probably paid many thousands of dollars though. Was it $10,000? $25,000? $50,000? I do not know.

If any of the material is not original gum, there is no recourse that can be taken today. Assuming the seller is even still active on eBay, you cannot go back years later and say, "Do you remember this stamp I bought from you nine years ago for $350? It is not original gum. I would like my money back." That is never going to happen.

I wonder why he did not ask himself these same questions when he was busy acquiring this material.

My instinct says that he probably grossly overpaid for at least some of the material in his collection. There are outright crooks on eBay. There are many clueless sellers too that just do not know stamps. If he bought that much material on eBay, there is a significant chance that at least some of his material is not original gum. Some of it could be fake or incorrectly cataloged as well.

I did not continue the correspondence, and he did not have any more questions. I think his is a collection that I will steer clear of.

Between material that is not original gum and material that may be fake and/or misidentified, I think this collector is going to be in for a rude awakening that the material he paid a lot of money for is only worth a fraction of his original purchase price.

I wish him luck and I hope his material is genuine. I have my doubts though.

Buying on eBay is not a problem if you know what you are doing and what you are looking at. Too many collectors though have limited knowledge, or they are not proactive about increasing their knowledge. They accept the material without question from sellers. If you know what you are doing, yes, there are bargains to be had on eBay. However, there are many traps that you can fall into as well.

Be careful and ask questions up front, not years later. Do not put yourself in a position where you grossly overpaid for material that is not what it purports to be.

eBay bidding

I was at a show and a customer was talking about eBay. He shared a tip that might be useful for you if you do business on eBay. I use eBay very little and only for specific things from a select group of sellers that I trust.

He said that he prefers to bid on material where the auction ends on Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday. I asked, "Why?"

His philosophy is this. He said that most people are on eBay on the weekends and, in general, there is more competition, and prices are higher for material ending on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. By Monday, people are either out of money from their weekend purchases or they are back at work. Therefore, he specifically targets material ending on Monday, Tuesday, or Wednesday because he has less competition.

I thought it was an interesting observation, and it makes sense to me. If you bid on eBay, I hope it helps you too.

Empty blue collection boxes

Near my office building along Seventh Ave in Pittsburgh sits four of the blue USPS mail collection boxes. All four are side by side. All four have extended necks for drivers to slip the envelopes into. There is one problem though.

All the boxes are on the right side of the road. They are also positioned right at the beginning of a ramp that leads to the interstate taking traffic away from the city.

To use the boxes, you need someone in the passenger side of your car where you could pull up and the passenger could put down their window and deposit the mail in the collection box. If you do not have a passenger, you have two options. First, you can stop your car, get out, and go slip the mail into the slot. Second, you could stop your car and try to lean over the center console and/or passenger seat and if you are tall enough, you may be able to get it in the slot.

Either option requires you to stop your car on the ramp to the interstate. You may get run over. Horns may be honking. A few drivers may use hand signals to register their frustration with your choice to stop your car in the middle of a busy travel lane. And these days, you have no idea who is carrying a weapon and may fire a few bullets your way.

Why the USPS put those boxes in that position at the ramp leading to the interstate, I have no idea. Whoever decided that this is a good idea should probably be fired.

There are regular slots on the backside for pedestrians to walk by and deposit envelopes. However, they are positioned on a ramp where there is a sidewalk that goes nowhere. No one walks by thinking, "Oh, I have this envelope in my hand. Let me put it in this box." You must go out of your way to use that box if you want to.

Those four boxes might get a dozen envelopes combined per day. I am being generous in saying that. It takes time for someone to open all four boxes and collect two or three envelopes per box.

One collection box would be more than sufficient. The three other boxes should either be scrapped or deployed to other parts of the city where they might be effective. They have been there for years. I doubt the USPS will take the initiative to better utilize their resources.

Horse and buggy delivery

Under President Biden, the USPS signed a $3 billion deal to supply new delivery trucks to replace its aging fleet. The new trucks were also supposed to be all electric. This was part of the Inflation Reduction Act.

President Trump won the 2024 election. Now the Department of Government Efficiency (DOGE) under Elon Musk has introduced the Return to Sender Act which would take at least some of the deal back. Maybe the entire deal? Who knows?

The contract was supposed to deliver 50,000 vehicles over the next three years. So far, 93 have been delivered.

I have no political point to make. My point is this.

The delivery vehicles in use today were launched in 1987 and were supposed to last 12 to 20 years. It has been 30 years. They are past the end of their useful life. Also, the vehicles built in 1987 were designed to carry trays of first-class mail. Today, the USPS delivers more packages. The trucks are not suited to today's delivery needs.

Some will say that if they continue with the electric vehicles, they are way behind schedule and the vehicles may not be what is best for the USPS because the Biden administration was focused on electric vehicles only. However, if the contract is scrapped (in part or all together), then the USPS continues to use outdated vehicles. At best, it may take another year to rebid the contract, select a supplier, and begin to take delivery of whatever the new vehicle design is. Meanwhile, the 1987 vehicles will struggle to keep up.

If things really get delayed, we may have to go back to horse and buggy to deliver the mail until the USPS and government can figure out what the next delivery vehicle will be.

The USPS operates at a loss each year and is plagued with delivery delays. This situation is not going to help matters. This will further erode confidence in the USPS to deliver the mail in a timely manner. Mail volumes, especially first-class mail, will continue to plummet as everyone changes to electronic communication because it is quicker and more reliable than the USPS.

Whether they stick with the electric vehicles or move to a new contract, I think either option is a losing proposition for the USPS. There is no way to really prop up its aging fleet. Why try and upgrade thirty-year-old vehicles? It is not cost effective.

The new Postmaster General coming in is going to have a royal mess on their hands to try and solve. I wish them luck. I do not see any easy options.

I have a small accumulation of the small hole variety on Scott #1056, the 2 ½¢ Bunker Hill coil. This variety is only known in precancel form and is one of the most difficult small hole varieties to find. MNH pairs catalog $850 each. MNH line pairs catalog $3000 each. Unfortunately, some of these line pairs became stuck together at some point in time. The face of the stamps is still reasonably crisp. Under magnification, you will detect tiny spots of missing ink from the face of the stamp and missing specks of black ink from the precancel where it adhered to the stamps on top. The backs of the stamps will have damaged gum with ink adhesions.

Special #5 Line pair with Washington, DC precancel. I have six of these line pairs. Catalog value is $3000. Because these are damaged copies, the price is $75. You will never find these line pairs at this price ever again.

This line pair has a small gum disturbance because whoever mounted it used too much saliva and a small line of disturbed gum is in the middle of the pair. All copies of #1616c are only known with the Pleasantville, NY precancel. Because this imperf line pair has a small disturbed gum area, it is just $500

Special #10 Israel Scott #1-9. Mint copies with tabs. The stamps have been lightly mounted on a presentation page. At worst, these would be NG copies. These are more like disturbed gum copies if you sweat them off the page. I left them on the page because this looks like an official presentation page. Also, I did not want to risk creating a thin on any of the copies. Cat value is $7000. Because these are not NH copies, the price is $500

Special #23 Small group of 21 sales cards of early mostly used (and a few mint) Iceland. Few trivial faults, no junk. Nice used 108-128 set ($223 cat). A #7 with ragged perfs ($100 cat). Cat value is $1080. $225

Special #24 Small group of 65 sales cards of mostly early Sweden. A few more modern issues. Mostly used, but a few mint. Most items catalog at $5-$10 each. Few tiny faults, no junk. A good starter collection of better material. Catalog value is $450. $90

Special #25 Small group of 41 sales cards with mostly used early Canadian issues. Light duplication. Trade the duplicates or become a dealer yourself! A fine #22 (cat $160). A F-VF #28 with nibbed perf (cat $125). A #96-100 used set ($179 catalog). Few tiny faults, no junk. Catalog value is $1300. $300

Special #26 Small group of 62 sales cards of mint Canada. Mostly early issues and about half are LH and the other half are NH. There are a few modern issues. MNH #244 (cat $55). MNH #211-216 (cat $38). LH #54 (cat $70). MNH #135 (cat $115) and more. There are a few duplicates. There are a few tiny faults, no junk. Catalog value is $1720 for $375

Special #27 Small group of about 30 MNH modern Canadian souvenir sheets. Catalog value is $288 for $85

Special #28 Small group of about 30 issues from Ireland. Mostly NH and LH material. A few used. Catalog value is $570 for $125

The following worldwide stamps (mostly by country) came from the same collector. Most of the early material will have tiny faults. A few will have more moderate faults. No junk though. Hence, the price is lower because it is not top of the line material. This is mixed mint and used material mounted on pages with hinges or Crystal Mounts.

Special #29 Austria $200 catalog value $55

Special #30 Austria $1200 catalog value $260

Special #31 Austria $500 catalog value $85

Special #32 Latvia, Lithuania, and a few other European stamps. $500 catalog value for $85

Special #33 New Zealand $500+ catalog value $75

Special #34 Germany, about 2000 stamps in a Minkus album $125

Special #35 Germany, about 4000 stamps in a Scott International album $200

Special #36 Greece, small collection of several hundred stamps $50

Special #37 Belgium $1700 catalog value $300

Special #38 United States Minute Man album pages. Some early material. Later issues are discount postage $100

Special #39 German stock on stock pages in a binder. Mostly used. $2200 catalog value. $250

Special #40 German stock in stock book. Light duplication. This is more like a collection than stock $1800 catalog value $175

Special #42 Austria accumulation of several thousand stamps on album pages and stock cards. Moderate duplication. $50

Special #43 India collection of several thousand stamps on album pages. Has Scott #2 and used C1-C6 set. No rarities, but some better material $85

Special #44 India smaller collection of about 500 stamps on album pages. $40

Special #45 India collection of about 1000 stamps on Harris album pages. $60

Special #46 Hungary collection of about 500-600 stamps on album pages. A few earlies. $35

Special #47 Yugoslavia collection of about 500 stamps on album pages. All early material before 1940. $55

Special #48 Germany specialized collection of early issues to inflation stamps after World War I. About 1500 stamps mounted on homemade pages. The catalog value is about $55. That does not do this collection justice though. This is advanced, but I would not quite say specialized. The collector has multiples of some of the issues. There are cancellations from various cities. There are varieties of some issues. Most of the notations on the pages are in German. This was assembled by a collector in Germany on their own handmade pages. Interesting presentation of material not normally seen. $60

Special #49 Norway. Small collection of about 300 mostly used issues on album pages. Early material is sparse. What is present is mostly common material. $20

Special #53 German collection in green Scott album. About 2000 stamps with plenty of back-of-the-book material along with some early issues. There is a used set of #C46 - #C56 ($80 cat value). The material is both mint (mostly LH) and used. There are some early German State issues. No rarities. There are better items though. $175

Mint panes. The following are MNH panes of early US stamps. Some of the panes have light damage as noted. Centering is generally F-VF. There could be a few minor perf separations. No rarities here, but these are somewhat better panes that are getting difficult to come by 90 years after their issuance.

Post-1940 Mint Never Hinged Issues and Plate Blocks

Due to low demand, used stamps are not listed here. If you need used stamps between Scott #772 and #2544A, let me know and I'll send you a separate listing. Prices are also available on my website. Sorry, I don't have used copies past Scott #2544A.

Material in this section are all MNH and at least F-VF centering. Mint is for the single/block/strip. Plate Block is the price for the plate block, where applicable.

Note: the "PN" designation is for full panes. Usually for issues where the margins contain additional/special printing. On some self-adhesive issues (mainly booklet or coil stamps) where there are no die cuts in the backing paper to separate them, mint singles of those stamps may NOT appear on original backing paper.
